Computing taxable social security benefits if applicant or family member receives other income:

1. Calculate "provisional income" - equal to the combined total of (1) 50% of Social Security benefits, (2) tax-exempt interest, and (3) the other non-Social Security items that make up the adjusted gross income
2. Calculate amount of taxable social security benefits based on the following:
 - For single people if provisional income is less than $25,000 – no SS benefits taxable
 - For married couple filing jointly, if provisional income is less than $32,000 - no SS benefits taxable
 - If single with provisional income between $25,000 and $34,000 – 50% of social security income taxable
 - If married and filing jointly with provisional income is between $32,000 to $44,000 - 50% of social security income taxable.
 - If single with provisional income more than $34,000 – 85% of social security income taxable.
 - If married and filing jointly with provisional income more than $44,000 – up to 85% social security benefits taxable.

Another way of determining whether the social security or railroad retirement benefits are taxable is to walk the applicant through the questions provided in an IRS interactive tool to determine the amount of taxable social security income. Here is the link to that tool:

<https://www.irs.gov/help/ita/are-my-social-security-or-railroad-retirement-tier-i-benefits-taxable>. It will take about 5 minutes if the applicant has their social security 1099 (Box 5).
